

Building Bright Futures

Parenting the child with attention deficits or learning differences

This four-week series is for parents who want to develop more effective skills in dealing with and relating to their children who have ADD (attention deficit disorder) or learning differences. Join other interested parents for the series as we share and learn techniques enabling parents to better understand the challenges and advantages of being learning different. Our emphasis will be on discovering the strengths in these children, understanding their needs, and strengthening parenting skills.
