

50 Years of Leaving Legacies
Sahasra Chakravarthula

For me, leaving a legacy means to be remembered with what good I did in my life for my friends and people around me. I always put myself first to learn new things to be true and to respect others. I believe if I am perfect, I can influence people around me. As a famous quote goes “Be the change you wish to see in the world.” This quote was said by Mahatma Gandhi. It means if you change yourself without flaws you will change the world around you.

I would not try to leave a legacy every day, if I knew it was to become legacy one day: each and every day counts how I take my studies seriously and perform hard work to get great results. With the books I read, what my parents have taught me, I learned to respect my teachers and elders. They are strong foundation for my better and blessed future. With the help I get from teachers I come back home learning new topics everyday. I like writing poems on my teachers and I think it as a good way of saying my thanks to them. Here’s one poem I would like to share with you.

Our, teachers are sweet,
They tell us to be tidy and neat.
Teachers teach us a lot,
From what they have got.
We want to acknowledge,
When they share their knowledge,
We love our teachers,
They are our leaders.

Yes! Teachers lead us to the right path. With their support, I learned not to worry about my end results, but, give hundred percent effort in every task.

In conclusion, about the topic of how Aldridge would remember me, I will be happy if I made my mark as a poet who writes poems about my well wishers, family and teachers.
